Electric Second Cars

Everyone knows that batteries now in common use would have to be recharged overnight after an electric automobile had been driven 75 to 100 miles. So the often-predicted popularity of the electric auto continually retreats over the horizon.

But everyone is thinking about weekend trips, while a great deal of short trip driving could be easily handled by a small electric car. A study of driving in Chicago and its suburbs has shown an average of about 21 miles a day, or 5.7 miles per trip. This is the viewpoint of the Electric Vehicle Council, which thinks the market is here and waiting, and that is of considerable interest to AMA Update published by the American Medical Association. Some calculations show the gasoline-powered automobile puts more than half of the pollution into the air we breathe.—Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal

Scientists Gather Data on Art of Acupuncture

By JOHN STOWELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. government scientists have been quietly gathering information from around the world the last few months on the 5,000-year-old Chinese medical art of acupuncture.

They are reluctant to talk about it with newsmen. One, asked if the inquiry was linked in any way to President Nixon's trip to Peking, noted that the chief executive had asked government agencies to avoid speculating on any aspect of

U.S.-Chinese affairs.

He emphasized that the fact-finding project is informal, "strictly on a professional-curiosity basis."

Another source, at the National Institute of Mental Health, said: "There is no program or official activity, and we're not starting or trying to start one."

The Associated Press first learned of the inquiry through an official of the British Acupuncture Association, who said his organization had received correspondence from Dr. J. David Miller, NIMH's chief of mental-health-care development.

Miller was said to be out of Washington on a personal trip.

Miller's assistant, Mark Krass, received authorization to discuss what has been learned about acupuncture. He emphasized that his work primarily concerns disclosing available literature, "strictly fact-finding without drawing conclusions."

Krass said government officials became interested in the ancient Chinese practice after four American physicians, among them famed heart specialist Paul Dudley White, observed acupuncture during a visit to China last year. White and Dr. Victor Sidel of New York later described their observations, in lectures to U.S. scientists.

"They all said acupuncture violated what they knew about Western medicine but it appeared to work," Krass said.

Acupuncture involves inserting long, metal needles into the body at various specific points to cure diseases, relieve pain and, more recently, to anesthetize.

"The Chinese don't feel it has anything to do with the nervous system, but no one knows why it works," Krass said. "They say when you have 750 million people and it has been working for 5,000 years, there must be something to it."

The first Chinese textbook on acupuncture, "Yellow Emperor's Classic of Internal Medicine," is believed to have been published around 2500 B.C., Krass said.

"The Chinese noticed in battle that when soldiers were hit with arrows, it actually had a therapeutic effect rather than an injurious effect in many cases," he said.

"They took it from there and realized that if a person was punctured with a needle at certain points, it would achieve therapeutic effects," Krass said. "Through trial and error they figured out which points worked and which didn't."

The practice spread in the 19th and early 20th centuries to other parts of the world including Western Europe, where about 3,000 acupuncturists now operate, he said.

Sudden Departure of Hughes Fits Pattern

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Howard Hughes' sudden departure from his hotel suite in the Bahamas fits closely the past comings and goings of the secretive billionaire.

Hughes slipped quietly into Las Vegas on Thanksgiving Eve in 1966, purchased a $300 million empire based on land and hotels, and left even more secretly on Thanksgiving Eve, 1970.

Hughes came to Nevada "to do some business and relax in the sun," his aides said after his arrival. When he left in 1970, almost four years to the day of his arrival, they said he was only taking a combination business and pleasure trip.

In a telephone conversation with a panel of newsmen last month a voice identified as that of Hughes said that he would like to return to Nevada but only after litigation against him is completed.

Two suits are currently in Nevada courts, Robert Maheu, who headed Hughes' Nevada operations until December 1970, has sued Hughes for $50 million. Maheu claimed he had a contract and Hughes Tool Co. had no authority to dismiss him.

That suit is still pending and the Nevada Supreme Court ruled last month that Maheu had the right to obtain a deposition from Hughes.

Herman "Hank" Greenspun, publisher of the Las Vegas Sun, filed a $14 million suit against the Tool company several weeks ago, seeking to prevent it from foreclosing on part of a $4 million loan to him.

State officials, including Gov. Mike O'Callaghan, have also expressed a desire to talk with the 66-year-old billionaire personally concerning his gambling holdings.

Hughes lived in Las Vegas surrounded by the same secrecy he enjoyed in the Bahamas. Maheu said he had glimpsed his mysterious boss on only two occasions, once when he stepped from the train that brought him here and a year later while entering a hotel elevator, throughout his Nevada stay, Hughes remained sequestered in his penthouse at the Desert Inn, one of the six hotels he owned. He also owns seven casinos, all but one at his hotels.

He apparently saw no one except his wife, former actress Jean Peters whom he divorced last year, and five male secretaries. He dealt only by telephone and letter with the lieutenants who ran his Nevada holdings.

By 1970, his holdings in Nevada were worth an estimated $300 million and he employed 8,000 persons, the largest work force in the state. His casinos paid gambling taxes that amounted to more than 5 percent of the state's annual budget.

Bombers Strike in Vietnam

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. warplanes struck inside North Vietnam for a third successive day Friday, knocking out six more antiaircraft guns, the U.S. Command announced.

Informants said the strikes occurred during a sudden shift in U.S. air attacks from South Vietnam to the 250-mile Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos which borders North Vietnam as well as South Vietnam.

Three Air Force F4s were bombing the supply network 35 miles northwest of the DMZ when a half dozen guns on the North Vietnamese side of the border opened fire in the vicinity of the Ban Karai Pass, a key entry point to the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The U.S. command said the F4s diverted from their primary mission and attacked the gun positions with bombs.

"Six guns were reported as either damaged or destroyed," the command said. "There was no damage to U.S. aircraft."

Twenty-five miles farther south, another battery of antiaircraft guns inside North Vietnam fired at an unarmed reconnaissance plane, the command said. F4 fighter escorts bombed the gun sites, but the results were not known.

The latest raids raised to 56 the number of "protective reaction" strikes reported by the command this year, more than half the 108 reported during all of 1971.

In South Vietnam, tactical fighter-bombers and B52 Stratofortresses which had been averaging 150 tactical strikes a day since Feb. 9 flew 10 in the latest 24-hour period.

Ten daily flights was about the number flown in the four months prior to the increase, which U.S. officials said was necessary to counter the massing of enemy forces along the western borders of South Vietnam.

In other air action, the South Vietnamese Air Force claimed its bombers destroyed a half dozen North Vietnamese trucks in strikes in the northwestern quadrant of South Vietnam between the Khe Sanh and the A Shau valley bordering Laos.

Meanwhile, although there was no heavy ground fighting reported, the Saigon command said there were 38 enemy-initiated incidents in the 24-hour period that ended at 6 a.m. today.

School Group Meets

The Citizens Committee For Better Quality Schools met Thursday night in Hope City Hall Courtroom. Approximately 75 persons attended.

General Chairman J. Matt McCauley called the meeting to order and the Secretary, Mrs. Arthur Dillard, read the minutes of the last meeting. Mrs. Dillard was substituting for the regular secretary, Mrs. Suella Tye.

McCauley then called on each of the Sub-committee chairmen for a progress report of each committee.

Following these reports, a general discussion was held and a question and answer period. The next meeting will be held Thursday, February 24, at 7:30 p.m. in a place to be announced.

Soviet Missile May Not Be Accurate

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Department officials say the Soviet triple-head SS9 missile is still not accurate enough to threaten U.S. Minuteman missiles.

But these officials predict the Russians eventually will come up with a more advanced multiple warhead.

Arguing for the Safeguard antimissile defense system, Pentagon leaders started, cautioning three years ago that the Soviet Union could be in position by 1975 to destroy 90 per cent of this country's land-based missiles with a surprise attack.

This warning was predicated on the belief that the Russians would develop effective mechanisms for ejecting triple, five-megaton warheads from SS9 missiles in a "footprint" that would assure destruction of Minuteman complexes.

But, after studying data from a long series of SS9 tests, U.S. experts have concluded the Russians were unable to achieve the required pattern.

Final judgments are not yet in because, as Adm. Thomas H.

Moorer told Congress Wednesday, this model of the SS9 "is still an enigma."

The model referred to by Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is less sophisticated than the separately aimed multiple warheads mounted on advanced U.S. missiles. These sophisticated warheads are called MIRVs.

"While the MIRV capabilities of the current SS9 ... system have not yet been demonstrated," Moorer said, "the intelligence specialists are in agreement that the Soviets will eventually develop MIRVs ..."

Moorer said "our greatest uncertainty at this time" is the ultimate objective of more than 90 missile silos built by the Russians in recent years.

"We don't know how many more of these silos the Soviets intend to build," Moorer said. "Nor do we know what particular missiles they intend to install in them."

President Nixon and Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird have said the Russians appear to be developing two new or improved ICBM systems.

Explaining Black Eye Is a Chore of Life

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — One of life's little chores is explaining how you got a black eye.

An optimist is a guy who thinks his story will be widely believed.

A cynic is a guy who thinks nobody will believe his tale, not even himself.

The cynic is usually right.

There is a sex difference in black eyes—as there is in everything else. If a woman gets a black eye, it is automatically assumed by one and all that she either got it innocently and accidentally or was beaten up by her husband, the brute. But if a man gets a black eye, it is automatically assumed that he was up to some kind of wrongdoing and merely got what he deserved.

A black eye is, of course, merely God's way of giving a man his comeuppance and saving him from his overweening pride. Without an occasional black eye to keep him humble, man would be unbearable.

The average man probably gets a black eye about once every 10 years of his life.

An odd thing about their occurrence is that they usually happen to a man when it is particularly embarrassing for him to have one. For example, it is most likely for him to acquire a black eye the day before he is supposed to make a speech.

It is rare indeed for him to get a black eye while he's in the hospital or the day after he goes into the woods on a two-week camping trip, when only bears and bluejays can jeer at him.

There are endless excuses given by victims as to how they got a black eye. Here are a few of the more common ones, along with the percentage of people the victim can expect to believe him:

"I ran into an open door in the dark."—0 per cent.

"I was hit by a golf ball."—2 per cent.

"It was raining and this fat lady rammed her umbrella in my eye while I was trying to get on the bus ahead of her."—5 per cent.

"I don't remember how it happened. I just woke up and my eye was black."—0 per cent.

"I was mugged."—10 per cent.

"My neighbor caught me kissing his wife in the kitchen, and pitched a flat in my eye. He must be some kind of a nut."—100 per cent.

This last excuse, true or false, is the best one to use. There will be at least a note of admiration and sympathy in the jeering you get. Everybody has to like a guy who gets a black eye while doing something he'd secretly like to do himself.

Pharaoh Ants Are Menace

LONDON (AP) — Hordes of pharaoh's ants—tiny, omnivorous insects with a sweet tooth—are menacing Britain's hospitals.

A fund is urgently needed to eliminate the invaders, who have penetrated beds, sterile packs, baby units and operating theaters, a public health inspector said.

Susan H. Beatson, of the Ministry of Agriculture's infestation control unit, wrote in the weekly medical journal Lancet: "Pharaoh's ants infestations can no longer be regarded as only a slight inconvenience."

"The feeding habit of these ants lend themselves to the carrying of pathogenic agents and the ability to carry such agents has been demonstrated."

The creatures forage mainly for meats and sweets.

Five Killed in Crash at Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Five persons were killed Friday night when an Air Force C130 cargo plane collided in the air with a jet trainer near here.

An Air Force spokesman said all of the dead were aboard the C130. The two crew members of the 737 jet trainer parachuted to safety. Both planes crashed and burned.

The collision occurred in the final approach area near the Little Rock Air Force Base and apparently both the four-engine cargo plane and the jet were trying to land, according to Maj. William R. Wirth of the Base Information Office.

The C130 was assigned to the 10th Tactical Airlift Training Squadron here and was on a routine training mission, Wirth said. The 737 was on a cross-country training mission from Webb Air Force Base at Big Spring, Tex., and was scheduled to land in Little Rock for a crew rest stop.

Dead crewmen were identified by the base as Lt. Maurice L. Cherry, 24, of Jacksonville, Ark., the co-pilot; T. Sgt. Raymond L. Hughes, 36, of Jacksonville, the flight engineer; Lt. Henry M. Thorson, 24, of North Brook, Ill., the student pilot, and Sgt. William D. Blair, 21, of Jacksonville, the loadmaster.

The name of the fifth victim was withheld pending notification of relatives.

The two men aboard the T37 who parachuted to safety are Capt. James Norelius and Capt. David Patrick, both of Webb Air Force Base.

None of the bodies had been recovered from the C130 by early today. Base officials said the wreckage was still burning.

The collision occurred shortly after dark on a clear night and officials said they did not know what caused the accident. The Air Force launched an investigation.

One of the men who bailed out of the plane landed in a willow tree in the yard of the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Price. The trainer fell about 30 yards from their house.

Price said the airman used his telephone to report the crash to the base.

The C130 crashed into a wooded area about one-fourth mile from U.S. 67.

The Prices and their daughter were inside their house when the crash occurred. Mr. and Mrs. Price said they ran outside and began putting water on the wreckage with hoses and buckets.

John Fraley, who lives about 200 yards from where the C130 fell, said he heard the initial crash and thought it was a "sonic boom." When two more explosions occurred, he ran outside and saw the wreckage.

She Can Keep All 90 Cats

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Marie Gates and her feline friends rejoiced after the Dade County Commission ruled the elderly woman could keep her cats ... all 90 of them.

The commission voted unanimously Thursday to permit the 79-year-old woman to keep the cats as long as she lived.

Neighbors who complained of nocturnal howling and excessive meowing had sought to force Mrs. Gates to get rid of a significant number of her cats.

Song, Dance on Office Table

BOSTON (AP) — Song and dance numbers from "Fiddler on the Roof" were performed Thursday on Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn's office table.

Karol Kostra and Ron Coralian offered the costumed interlude during a meeting with Quinn to set plans to present the musical at Walpole state prison March 3.

"It's a tremendous idea," Quinn said, adding that he would try to attend.

The show currently is running in Framingham.

ACUPUNCTURE isn't the only ancient art thriving in today's China. The circus still scores heavily with audiences with acrobatics, such as this display at the Shanghai circus, around for centuries.

The Jesus People: A Plan for Action

"I have become convinced that the 'Jesus Revolution' is making a profound impact on the youth of America and shows signs of spreading to other countries. One thing is certain: Jesus Christ can no longer be ignored! Our generation cannot escape Him. We cannot dismiss Him as a myth or a figment of the imagination."

Billy Graham in "Jesus Generation"

By REV. DAVID POLING

Certain independent, evangelical youth organizations caught the early signals of the Jesus movement. Campus Crusade, Inter-Varsity, Youth For Christ, and Young Life were among the first to sense the rising interest of youth in the Jesus message. Some of the movement was pure therapy—trying to find someone or something to take the place of drugs or break the bondage to addiction, sexual disasters, and terrifying games with witchcraft.

Duane Pederson and his "Hollywood Free Paper" (now reaching a one million press run every month) tackled the underground film movement head-on and offered a paper filled with joy, hope, and recovery. Bible study centers were opened over California. Campus revolutionaries found their match in the Jesus kids who turned thousands away from mindless violence to meaningful encounter with Jesus.

One person who has kept in touch with the various groups of the Jesus movement—here and overseas—is none other than Billy Graham. His crusades have been attended heavily by young people and the kids have found a much warmer welcome from the Graham team than in many of the traditional churches—which seem terrified by a genuine religious revival!

In his new book, "The Jesus Generation" (Zondervan $4.95), Dr. Graham gives an excellent summary of the problems facing young people today—as well as their parents. He devotes much time and space to the practical fulfillment of a conversion experience.

It is not enough to drift in the afterglow that accompanies a major turnaround in one's religious life. Direction, planning, and response are the key to growth in the Christian life. Writes Graham:

"One of a Christian's responsibilities in following Christ is to have a new attitude toward work. So many young people want Christ without responsibility. Jesus was not a dropout. As a carpenter, He worked hard with his hands. The Apostle Paul made tents for a living while he carried on the work that God had assigned him. Whatever work a Christian does is done unto the Lord. He should do his best at whatever his trade or vocation."

Dr. Graham urges young people to follow their conversion with commitment: concern for the lonely, the poor, those in prison or institution. He gave this example:

"I heard about a colony of so-called hippies who were converted to Jesus Christ. Visiting such families in distress became their 'thing.' A home was robbed. The family was in distress. This group helped them. They prayed for them. But they also secured legal aid for them. This is Christian commitment in action."

Right now the Jesus movement is mainly made up of young people. But their close companion and frequent counsel is a tall grandfather from Montreal, Billy Graham, who speaks to their condition with understanding and grace.

Here is a hand from our files that proves nothing except that everyone seems to like to help out deserving experts in duplicate tournaments. It was played some 30 years ago by John Crawford and needless to say he wound up with a top score.

His choice of a no-trump rather than a two diamond rebid is typical of the Crawford of those days.

West opened the three of hearts and Crawford won the first trick with the queen. A lesser player might have tried for six diamond tricks, but Crawford realized that he would be in real trouble if he played out the ace and king of diamonds and the suit failed to break. So he led a low diamond at trick two.

West was in with the queen and played the five of spades. At this point Johnny could have settled for eight tricks by going up with the ace but he wanted everything that wasn't nailed down so he played low from dummy. East took his king and at this point could have rattled off five tricks and set Johnny one trick. East didn't know that Johnny held all the missing diamonds or that he didn't really have a club stopper. East led his fourth best club!

John went up with the queen.

When the queen held John ran off his diamonds. West was squeezed in spades and hearts. He actually unguarded his king of hearts so Johnny came down to the ace of spades and ace-small of hearts in dummy for five odd.

1 container (8 ounces) commercial sour cream
1 tablespoon catchup

In a 10-inch skillet melt the butter. Add onion and cook over moderate heat until golden-brown. Add beef, salt, pepper and oregano; mash with a fork until crumbly and beef loses its red color. Add the mushrooms, including the liquid in the can, the sour cream and catchup; stir well and heat but do not boil. Serve very hot over rice. Makes 4 or 5 servings.

Basic Bodysuit

A bodysuit is a basic for many people. A center around which to make those quick changes from knickers to pants skirts to long skirts.

Sweater Suit

Going along with the clamor for carefree fabric, comes the sweater suit. Long and close-fitting or short and flared, spring suits will never be the same.

Like eating peanuts or popcorn, stopping with a bite of dessert calls for more will-power than most are willing to call upon. For us weaker souls, it is easier to eat a mini-pie filled with fruit than be faced with a large slice of pie. Especially good are Fried Mini-Pies filled with fruit such as strawber-

GOOD LUNCH

Rowena's Poached Chicken with Lettuce and Tomatoes
Whole-wheat Toast

FRUIT Beverage
ROWENA'S POACHED CHICKEN

Serve this chicken as is or in sandwiches.

3-pound frying chicken
Tops and leaves of 1 bunch celery

1 medium onion, cut in thin strips
2 medium carrots, pared and quartered

Few sprigs parsley
1 1/2 cups water
Salt to taste

Cut off wings and legs of chicken; leave rest whole. In a large deep skillet place the celery, onion, carrot and parsley; add water and salt. Place chicken over vegetables, wings and legs at side; remaining portion in center. Bring to a boil; simmer until chicken is tender—about 30 minutes. Remove chicken; discard skin and bones, removing meat in large pieces. Arrange dark and white meat alternately and pressing down in a 1 1/2-quart glass loaf dish (about 8 by 4 1/2 by 2 3/4 inches) or similar utensil. Cover tightly and chill. At serving time, turn chicken out of dish; there should be a slight layer of jelly at bottom. Slice thick and serve with lettuce and tomatoes; top with mayonnaise or some other salad dressing. (Strain broth and use in another dish or puree in electric blender with the cooked vegetables and use as a soup base.) Makes 6 servings.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Disease Can Cause Changes in Bones

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I would very much appreciate it if you could give me some information on what might be checked and if there is some medication for my problem. My body structure has changed in size and this is not due to a weight change. An example would be I am unable to wear the hats, gloves, or shoes that I wore. Whatever has taken place has also affected my vision. The eyeball protrudes and yet is sunk back into the head due to the bone around it growing and therefore changing my face, which was round, to a more oblong shape. My ears have been giving me much trouble. My mouth and throat have grown up and back so that I have to be very careful that I do not choke when eating.

I did see a gland specialist. He said bone or body structure cannot be changed, but my body has signs that it is doing just that.

Dear Reader—I presume a gland specialist would recognize bone growth associated with a glandular disorder. Your description suggests that you have an abnormal function of the pituitary gland.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

hormone from the pituitary can result in giants. If the bones are already sealed so that they don't grow, over-activity of the pituitary gland can cause changes of the hands and feet and changes of the face and head as you have described them.

Commonly, individuals with these problems cannot wear the same ring size that they used to wear. Difficulties with vision sometimes occur with this disorder because the pituitary gland is also located where the two optic nerves branch outward to go to each eye. If you should have an overgrowth of the pituitary gland in this area, it can affect vision.

I would strongly recommend that you check with your local medical society and ask to be seen by an endocrinologist. If you are near a university medical center, I would suggest that you write there for an appointment in the endocrinology section for the possibility of acromegaly, which is the technical term for the condition I suspect that you may have.

I am astonished by your statement that a gland specialist told you that bone or body structure cannot be changed. This suggests strongly to me that you have been seeing the wrong gland specialist, because acromegaly is a well-recognized problem and it certainly does increase the size of bones, particularly the hands, feet and head.

Helen and Sue Bottel

The Generation Gap

Too Serious Too Soon?
DEAR HELEN AND SUE:
I'm trying to better myself by becoming an honest, sincere, unmaterialistic, concerned person, and I am beginning to seriously think about future responsibilities.

Well maybe this is good, and what God wants, but I find that in trying, I see much that is lacking in people, and I'm very critical inwardly. It becomes harder and harder for me to have that carefree unworriedness that is part of being a teenager. It's even an effort for me to laugh at something silly or make a funny remark.

I find it uncomfortable now, being around kids who are happy-go-lucky. The more I worry the worse it seems. I know I'm very sensitive and I think and analyze too much, so things effect me deeply. This sounds confused, but I guess it all boils down to: should I be self-seeking and have fun, or selfless and lose friends? —WONDERING AND CONFUSED
DEAR WON:

Don't go overboard, one way or the other. A balanced person—teen or adult—enjoys life while trying to better it. When you become so concerned with improving the world that you see nothing but bad in people around you, it's time to holler "Tilt," and punch the "laugh button."

And remember: Being responsible and dedicated is great, but if this makes you feel "above all those other dummies," it's a form of selfishness. —HELEN

DEAR WONDERING:
Why get so serious about life so young? Not that it's wrong to be concerned, but you only live once. Maybe "living" to you is getting into world affairs and pulling straight "A's," but to others it's having fun as long as possible because they know that soon enough they must get into that great big ugly world and fight to make a living.

I say live the way which pleases you most while you still have a choice, and don't get on others' backs for doing their own thing. —SUE

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:
This good buddy of mine (a boy) and I talk about everything, so when he went away to college, we continued to WRITE about everything. We aren't going together.

Well, my Dad happened to read one of his letters that answered a question I'd asked him about sex. Right away, Dad assumed this was an invitation, and we were planning a big love affair when he comes home. So he forbids me to write again, or see him. I've explained till I'm blue, but parents just don't understand. They read your column, so maybe you can help.

What's wrong in discussing sex with a boy? —ELLY
DEAR ELLY:

Frank and open discussions about sex are quite common among modern teens—and if your Dad doesn't know this, it's time somebody told him. So I guess we're elected. Take it, Sue.

—HELEN
DEAR ELLY'S DAD:
"Talk" doesn't make a girl pregnant—or even get her to bed. It's experimenting, WITHOUT frank discussions, that sets her up for trouble.

Sex isn't a taboo subject any more—and that's a very healthy thing. Maybe you and your wife should get in on the discussions too. —SUE

MADDOX Here's a New Natural Cookbook

By GAYNOR MADDOX

A surprisingly interesting and uncultured work, "The Natural Foods Cookbook" has just been published. It contains over 700 contributed recipes, not one allegedly having any artificial flavors, colors, softeners, emulsifiers, bleaches, preservatives, chemicals or dehydrogenated fat.

How come? Because the author is dedicated to sea salt, seed sprouts, wheat-germ and homemade yogurt.

Jean Hewitt has a master of arts degree in foods and nutrition from Columbia University, is the home economist for the New York Times. She is married to a chemist, has two sons, one in college.

Despite her natural foods interests she says, "I am definitely not a nut. Not a faddist. I don't share any of the natural food philosophies or cults. But I grew up in England, where every family had at least a backyard garden. Everything was organically grown. I grew up being a natural foods enthusiast. But I'm also a professional nutritionist."

The journalist-home economist has sharp eyes.

"I'm horrified when I see grocery carts in the supermarket stacked with junk and high-calorie foods," she confesses, adding:

"But I do see young people at the natural foods shelves picking up food grains, soybeans, brown rice and sesame seeds. The youngsters are causing prices for these things to drop. People are buying more. The young homemakers and other youthful buyers understand that some things basic to eat taste better than doctored-up foods."

Miss Hewitt says she never uses canned or frozen foods. Nor any packaged mixes. She rarely buys any things at a bakery, either.

"We are traditionally a family which likes to experiment in life. My husband and sons go along with me on natural foods. That's why, when I get home from the office, I enjoy cooking for them."

Her book, "The New York Times Natural Foods Cookbook," is dedicated to people around the country who believe in the natural way of eating for good health (and can afford to pay the prices).

Mini-Pies for Dessert

Fried mini-pies filled with strawberries make perfect dessert.

ries or even a canned apple-sauce.

FRIED MINI-PIES

1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour, sifted
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
4 tablespoons shortening
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup ice water
1 1/2 cups sliced, sweetened strawberries*
3 pints corn oil

Sift together flour, salt and baking powder. Divide shortening into two parts. Cut half the shortening into flour mixture until it resembles cornmeal. Cut in the remaining shortening until it is the size of a pea. Sprinkle 3 tablespoons ice water over mixture. Roll lightly. (If remaining water is needed to form a ball, repeat as above.) Roll on floured board to 1/4-inch thickness. Cut into 3 1/2-inch rounds. Fill rounds with sweetened strawberries. Moisten edges well. Place a second round on top and press edges together with a fork. Turn deep fryer heat selector to 425 degrees and heat oil. Slip turnovers carefully into hot oil and fry 3 to 4 minutes or until golden brown. Turn once. Drain on absorbent paper. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar, if desired.

(*Or use other sweetened fresh fruit, canned apple-sauce, etc.)

Allison Tries for 4 Straight

By HUBERT MIZELL
Associated Press Sports Writer
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It's been a week for high-speed tragedy at Daytona International Speedway. A week, too, for low-speed hilarity.

Now comes the big one. "The Daytona 500 is the business race," says multititled driver Bobby Allison. "The little events are great fun, but the 500 puts groceries in the freezer."

Allison began a winning week Thursday by capturing a 125-mile qualifier for the $178,000 Daytona 500, driving his Chevy at 178 miles per hour. He won again Friday in the Grand American Class, taking the Citrus 250 in a Mustang.

Today it's the Permatex 300 in a Mercury for workhorse Bobby.

"I'd love to take four straight, but the 500 is where the gravy is," said the 34-year-old speed whiz from Hueytown, Ala. "But even if I swept everything this week, I can't really be happy."

Allison watched in horror Thursday as a close buddy, Raymond "Friday" Hassler, was killed in a crash. Hassler's car in a second 125-mile race was smashed from both sides during a grinding 13-car pileup.

But Friday's Citrus 250 provided some comic relief, as competitors slipped and skidded through a 30-minute rainstorm.

"You get some fun out of it," said Allison, "once you learn how far you'll slide in a puddle or on a muddy bank."

Once, Allison's Mustang struck a slick spot going into a turn and he missed it altogether. "I kept guiding and it kept sliding," he said. "Soon, I'd missed an entire section of the track. I just kept on going and took my one-minute penalty. It was easier than turning back."

The rain finally subsided and Allison's average speed was 98.339 for the 67 laps on the 3.81-mile road course. He earned $4,550.

Tiny Lund of Cross, S.C., made $2,650 for finishing second in a Firebird.

In another Friday event, Gregor Kronegard of Sweden won the Inver House 100 for Formula Vee cars at a speed of 104 miles an hour. His payoff was $2,500.

Bert Hawthorne of Saddle River, N.J., was second and Jochen Mass of Germany third.

Esposito Just Wants Playoff

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
"I don't worry about the goals," said Boston's Phil Esposito. "Our aim is to stay in first place and win the playoffs. That's where the money is."

For a guy not concerned about scoring, he does an awful lot of it. Like on Thursday night in Philadelphia, for example.

His first one was the only one the Bruins needed to beat the Flyers—but when you're hot, you're hot. So the National Hockey League's scoring leader snacked in two more for a hat trick and the 4-1 victory that kept the Bruins eight points ahead of New York in the East Division.

The Rangers kept within reach of Boston by beating Los Angeles 6-4 and, in the night's only other NHL game, Pittsburgh blanked Buffalo 2-0.

"I didn't think we played very well the first 10 minutes," said Bruins Coach Tom Johnson. The scoreboard showed he was right.

Simon Nolet got the Flyers out in front with his 19th goal of the season just 3:29 into the game. But with less than two minutes remaining in the first period, Bobby Orr evened things up with his 26th goal, batting in a rebound of John McKenzie's shot.

Esposito assisted on that goal and owned the rest of the game outright, scoring his first midway in the middle period on a soft 10-foot shot that eluded goalie Doug Favell.

THOUGH HE is relatively small for a National Basketball Association center at 6-foot-9, Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics (No. 18 in the above photos) has more than held his own as he battles such opponents as 7-foot-2 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Milwaukee, left, and 6-foot-11 Nate Thurmond of Golden State, above. The play of Cowens, in only his second season in the NBA, has sparked the Celtics to a big lead in the league's Atlantic Division.

Shows Are Warp and Woof of Dog's Life

By CHARLES MIRON

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Quote: "Those fancy dogs are so high-strung." Judith had never been to a dog show, so I took her to Trenton, where close to 4,000 dogs were entered, the highest American dog show entry since before World War II.

Such fancy dogs as German Shorthaired Pointers, Toy Manchester Terriers, Lhasa Apsos, Whippets and Samoyeds were among the pedigreed entries. After close to three hours of absolute fascination she turned to me and said: "When do they bark? They're all so well-behaved."

Quote: "They must be doped to get them so 'up' for a show."

Ramos Grown Up at 23

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mandi Ramos won and lost the world's lightweight championship before he knew what it meant to reign as king of his class.

Now, at the age of 23, Ramos says he's grown up. He'll try to regain the World Boxing Council title Friday night against Pedro Carrasco of Spain in a scheduled 15-round bout at the Sports Arena.

He was only 20—youngest 135-pound champion ever—when he knocked out Carlos Cruz exactly three years ago Friday night. He held the title a little more than a year, losing it to Ismael Laguna.

During the time he was champion, he was arrested for investigation of possession of marijuana and booked on a drunken driving charge. He had his boxing license suspended by the California Athletic Commission and his driver's license suspended by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

"I've made many mistakes in my life," said Ramos, of Los Angeles. "I didn't know what it meant to be the champ until Laguna beat me. Heck, I was king. But, boy did things change fast."

"I found out that after I lost my title I also lost a lot of so-called friends. So I decided to fight hard and often. I wanted to fight all the top contenders, beat them, then go after my title."

This fight is a rematch ordered by the WBC after Carrasco defeated Ramos on a 12th-round foul Nov. 5 in Madrid. Carrasco's countrymen booed the result, and the WBC later declared the fight "no contest."

Ramos, whose record is 32-4 with 20 knockouts, floored Carrasco four times in November, and the Nigerian referee's decision was denounced as incompatible with the action.

The 28-year-old Carrasco is 124-1-1 with 71 knockouts.

After close to three hours of absolute fascination she turned to me and said: "When do they bark? They're all so well-behaved."

Quote: "They must be doped to get them so 'up' for a show."

My first show champion was Ch. Misty of Ronim, a greyhound with parti-color markings. She has always had a very sweet disposition. The humility she showed in her everyday life seemed to suddenly come into a new orbit once at Far Hills, N.J., where she beat out a Crufts and Westminster winner, Ch. Shalfleet Starlight of Foxden, under the influence of nothing save a love to be 'on' when she appeared center stage.

Neither Bob nor Jane Forsyth, who each handled her to victories would ever condone such an illegal practice as stimulants.

Quote: "You can never beat out one of those professional handlers for a blue ribbon."

Pro handlers such as the Forsytes, Peter Green, Richard Bauer, Jeffrey Brucker, Clint Harris and Jeanne Millet are tops in their field, along with two dozen others, but as for being unable to beat them out . . . nonsense. I saw a 10-year-old girl beat out three topnotch handlers with her toy poodle in a Pennsylvania show.

Quote: "One of those big monsters is sure to attack your little chihuahua."

After a few hundred shows, I admit to seeing only one incident take place. An Irish Wolfhound had its toe stepped on by a spectator. Unfortunately another Irish Wolfhound was passing by at that instant and a brief tangle ensued.

Both were heavyweights, and no bantamweight Chihuahua was involved. If the dogs are not bunched up like subway passengers then no incident should occur. If not, well . . . have you ever been knocked around on a rush-hour subway?

Quote: All the shows are 'fixed' in advance. Only a select few win.

An oft-heard quote, one based upon little evidence and much bitterness. So far as I have seen, if a top handler has a first-rate dog and an amateur has a dog almost as good the handler might be favored. But the reason is an honest one.

He brings out the best in a show dog, sets him up better, moves the dog to advantage and does not keep setting a dog up constantly, thereby wearing the canine out. In a small show, perhaps a bit of favoritism is shown. In a big show . . . NEVER.

Quote: "Every show is the same."

Totally untrue. Some dogs perform better in outdoor shows, especially young dogs out for their first showings. More room, less closeness as concerned the crowd, less noises to excite them. Great outdoor shows such as Darien, Westchester, Pasadena, and Devon are perfect for getting a new Weimaraner, great Dane, dachshund or English setter on his way. But, veteran dogs, when they ter stage.

Gets Bored in Classroom

NEW YORK (AP) — Ch. Chinoe's Adamant James may be the top show dog in the country, he may have set all kinds of world records for victories and he very well may be unbeatable.

But he gets bored in the classroom.

"He sleeps through all my lectures," said his owner, Dr. James E. Prickett, a 42-year-old veterinarian who specializes in equine research at the University of Kentucky. "I always take him to the office and classroom with me when he is not showing."

Dr. Prickett has owned the 3½-year-old liver and white dog since he was 10 weeks old. He is known as D.J., for Diamond Jim, to Dr. Prickett and his handler, Clint Harris.

"D.J. is the first and only English Springer spaniel I've ever shown," said Dr. Prickett. "I have a couple of others at home, but I don't send them to shows. D.J., by the way, doesn't hunt."

But D.J. does everything else. After setting all kinds of world records last year, he won in his first appearance of 1972, the American Spaniel Club specialty here. And Tuesday night before a crowd of about 11,000 in Madison Square Garden, he won the big one for the second year in a row—best-in-show at the 96th Westminster Kennel Club event.

D.J.'s triumph was hardly unexpected. Last year, he left the canine world in shambles by winning breed honors 94 times in 97 shows. He won 86 group awards and 48 best-in-show.

Both his group and best-in-show totals were world records. His sire, Ch. Sallyn's Aristocrat set the previous marks of 73 groups and 45 bests four years ago.

"One thing is certain," said Dr. Prickett, "we will not try for Westminster again next year. D.J. won't retire, though. We'll spot him in shows here and there and I plan to start him in the obedience division."

Sports at Turning Point, Bradley Says

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The future of pro basketball specifically, and pro team sports in general, will change mightily within the next five years, Bill Bradley says.

Bradley is the New York Knick forward and player representative, a former Rhodes Scholar and one of the most respected and articulate athletes America has ever had.

He sees the hearings of the Senate Anti-Trust subcommittee on the proposed merger by owners of the American Basketball Association and the National Basketball Association as a decisive point in team sports in the United States.

"One of two things will come from it," said Bradley. "Either there will be no merger or there will no longer be the reserve clause as we know it."

If the merger proposal is turned down, then Congress could eventually act to dissolve the current monopolies of major league baseball and the National Football League.

If a merger is sanctioned, then, Bradley believes, there will have to be either an elimination or a revision of the reserve clause. Now, the reserve clause binds a player to a team until the team decides to trade, sell or release him.

But in football, a player may join another team after playing out his option. However, commissioner Pete Rozelle then decides which player (or players) the new team must send to the old team in what he deems a fair trade. This discourages one team from purchasing the contract of the "option" player. The new team may be leery of getting an unfavorable trade. If the merger goes through with the basketball teams, the NBA players feel their rights to bargain individually will be sorely impaired. (And no longer would a Joe Caldwell or Zelmo Beaty have an opportunity to "jump" leagues.)

The owners say they must have the merger because, they contend, they are losing money (though this is highly questionable, what with tax write-offs and player depreciations, and so forth).

"And what if they are losing money?" asked Bradley. "They are in business. Businessmen must do the best they can to make things go. But restricting the right of a player is totally against the American system of free enterprise and open competition."

And why are the teams losing money, if they really are?

"Because the owners themselves have created the situation," he said. "They got into the bidding war of offering million-dollar deals to players. I think that'll change. There will be no more Artis Gilmore-type contracts. The owners are going through a resurgence of the businessmen's side over the sportsmen's side."

Also, believes Bradley, teams that in fact lose money do so often because of bad management, and because of a competing league.

Owners also say that there will be chaos if players are allowed to jump from one team to another whenever they want, and that the rich would get richer.

"I don't think either is true," said Bradley. "Why would a man who is established in one city, who has a family and growing business interests and sense of community in one city, want to change? Why would Jerry West, for example, want to come to New York? Also, why would a man who is playing, say, in Phoenix want to come to a better team and be eighth man? It doesn't make sense."

"One important consideration would keep one team from getting all the high-priced players: That is, no team could afford so great a payroll. Even if those players wanted to jump, and I don't think they would. Money is not always the sole factor in a player's considerations."

Bradley added that fan interest would probably increase, not decrease. "How long, for example, did it take fans in New York to get used to Earl Monroe?"

Bradley said the owners will probably be changing in order to keep players. Teams will return to local ownership as opposed to absentee ownership by conglomerates.

"Local ownership will try to humanize its relations between players and themselves, and players and the community," said Bradley. "Right now, there is a wedge between players and owners. You see this because of the players' necessity to hire outside agents. In the future, owners may take greater interest in what players are doing on the outside. This will also help players develop deeper community ties—and be a greater incentive for a player to want to stay in a town."

"Now, I think players are considered a thing apart. And everybody they come in contact with reinforces the player's opinion that he is just a player."

In the future, too, Bradley sees the possibility of profit-sharing as an incentive to a player to remain with a team.

It's easy to laugh at the other fellow's troubles.

BILL BRADLEY, erstwhile Rhodes scholar and now a New York Knick regular, says the outcome of the proposed merger between the American and National Basketball Associations will change the structure of professional sports.
